

Pearson Accelerated Pathways Verizon FAQ's

Is Pearson Accelerated Pathways a college?

No. Pearson Accelerated Pathways is not a college. We have partnered with over 2,000 regionally accredited colleges to deliver our online self-paced and instructor-led course content. Our flexible program enables you to earn your bachelor's degree from your chosen college, on your schedule and without breaking the bank.

How does Accelerated Pathways save me money?

The traditional college method (taking all your courses through one school) is actually one of the most expensive ways to earn your degree. Why? Because college courses are expensive — $1,044 per course on average; and that doesn't include the cost of books. We help save you money by replacing those expensive courses with our much more affordable options – as low as $675 per course which includes the cost of materials and we have no fees.

Will courses taken through Pearson transfer to my college of choice?

We design every student's degree program based on the graduation requirements at his/her chosen college and every recommendation comes with a money-back guarantee. (We guarantee your course will transfer or we'll give you your money back plus $1,000 for your lost time.)

How do Pearson's courses save me time?

We offer flexible online courses in two learning modes, self-paced and instructor-led (where available), so that you can select the learning format that best fits your needs and schedule.

- Our self-paced courses - have no mandatory class times, no discussion boards, and no due dates. This means you can study when you want, where you want, with no extra hassle. You can work as fast or slow as you need to, however, it does require discipline to ensure you have set yourself up for success by planning out study and test times.
- Our instructor-led courses - offer more structure and collaboration with other classmates with weekly due dates and discussion boards. NOTE: Not all courses are available via instructor-led format, however, we are working diligently to add more as quickly as possible.

Pearson Accelerated Pathways Verizon FAQ's

Can I speak with someone to get answers?

Absolutely. We understand there are many steps along your education path and it's not always clear what's next.

- If you have not completed an advising session and are pursuing an undergraduate degree, fill out this questionnaire to determine if an advising session and/or Pearson courses will be required.
- If you have completed the questionnaire and need to schedule an advising session you may do so here.
- If you have completed an advising session and you have questions about your Degree Plan, how to transfer credits, or simply want to see what electives are available, please reach out to your advising coach who will provide you with additional details.
- If you have completed the questionnaire and are not required to complete an advising session or take Pearson courses, please visit the Verizon Tuition Assistance page and complete each required step.

When can I start?

You can enroll through Pearson Accelerated Pathways and submit your TAP application at any time after you have finalized your degree plan. We recommend speaking with an advisor about which study modality might be right for you. If you have already completed your advising session, you can connect directly with an advising coach who will provide you with additional details. If you have not completed your advising appointment, fill out this questionnaire.

What should I do if I'm a current student with questions?

If you're currently enrolled with Pearson Accelerated Pathways and have questions, we recommend reaching out to your advising coach at verizon.coaches@pearson.com or student services at studentservices-ap@pearson.com

ALWAYS LEARNING